FOR LITTLE FOLKS.

Santa Claus Land. Three little folks said that they would stray (Such a marvelous enterprise), So they chartered a boat for lands remote And then started forth where far away
The Land of Santa Claus lies.

To the north they sailed so fast—so fast— That they passed each ship on the deep. Over moonbeams bright did they sail all night, They had silver cars and golden mast

They came to an iceberg, big and grand. Far away near the northern lights, And there found a town of extreme renown. In the center of Santa Claus Land, Only seen on Christmas nights.

The walls of the town were made of toys. And the palace with tapers gleamed: On mounds of snow Christmas trees in a row Shook playthings down for good girls and boys And sweets without end, it seemed.

The little folks reamed a few short hours In this splendid, enchanted land; They danced and the 'sang till the iceberg rang; They are all the swiets and picked the flowers. That bloomed on the crystal sand.

Away from this place of rare delight
They were forced to sail at the dawn.
Then as they look. back o'er the moonlit track. Lo, the glittering icet arg, big and white, And Santa Claus Land were gone! -New York World.

Something She Hadn't Thought Of.

Mary is the proud possessor of a doll that her younger brother has never been allowed to play with. But a short time ago Mary decided that if she married the doll to Harold the doll's happiness would be increased. Harold at first objected, but finally allowed his sister to say the few linding words. Then grabbing the doil he started on a run for out of doors, pursued by Mary. "You can't have her any more," he called back. "You would marry her to me, and now she's mine."-Boston Transcript.

Defending Her Baby.

The mother had been severely wounded, and her apparent incapacity, combined with the smell of blood, had doubtless made the lion more reckless than usual. The calf was the game that his majesty yearned for, but the sorely stricken parent was evidently determined that her child should not be a victim while she possessed life. The youngster knew its danger, too, and kept as close to the mother's flank-at times almost between her legs—as it possibly could.—London Graphic.

An Intelligent Bird.

A species of woodpecker inhabits the driest parts of Mexico, where during the droughts it must die of starvation unless it made a store. To prevent this it selects the hollow stem of a species of aloe, the bore of which is just large enough to hold a nut. The woodpecker drills holes at interval in the stem, and fills it from bottom to top with the nuts, the separate holes being apparently made for convenience of access to the column of nuts within. The intelligence which not only constructs a special storehouse, but teaches the woodpecker to lay by only the nuts, which will keep, and not the insects, which would decay, is perhaps the highest form of bird reasoning which has vet been observed, - London Speciator.
